Background

Many IRP registrants use vehicle registration services licensed in California to process their apportioned registration applications.

The IRP is an apportioned registration program that allows payment of license fees based on the total distance vehicles are operated in two or more member jurisdictions. The base jurisdiction calculates and collects the license fees due for all member jurisdictions in which the registrant's fleet or vehicle(s) are operated.

Periodic audits are conducted of IRP registrant fleet records to ensure the accuracy and integrity of information reported, compliance with the IRP agreement, and proper payment of fees to all applicable jurisdictions.

Distribution
